9
FIRST OF LECTURES ON WOMEN
WILL BE TUESDAY AT UM

MISSOULA--

The first in a series of nine public lectures and discussions on women will be held from 8-10 p.m. Tuesday (Sept. 28) in room 103 of the University of Montana Liberal Arts Building.

Mrs. Marty Hemingway, an undergraduate student majoring in social welfare at UM, and who is program coordinator, said the free series--entitled "Reality and Reaction, A Symposium on Women"--is an effort "to help participants understand women better." Men and women are invited to participate.

Tuesday's lecture, entitled "Physiology and Femininity," will be presented by Dr. Charline G. Smith, professor of anthropology at UM. An hour discussion period will follow the lecture.

University faculty members leading the discussions will donate their time to the program without charge. Dr. Richard A. Solberg, dean of the UM College of Arts and Science has okayed departmental participation in the series. The Arts and Sciences Office is sponsoring the series.
